

Last night we had our monthly potluck here at Stillwaters.

Potluck at Stillwaters

This regular foray into the culinary talents of this neighborhood is a “must try at least once” event. Regular shows at the table are meatballs, wonderful casseroles, salads, a yummy cheesy cauliflower treat, deviled eggs and an array of desserts that include lemon, pumpkin, apple and berry pies and many things chocolate!

Last night’s potluck also included two special presentations. First, Sherri Garland showed a series of pictures from last Christmas, with the reminder that this is the last potluck until January. It’s time to prepare for the holidays and especially the Resident’s Christmas Dinner on December 15th here in the Gathering Place.

Second, was a brief piano concert played by Bogey V. a resident of Colonial Residence. He will be back January for a full concert of music. Check out this YouTube link to see this talented player.

Here is a little bit of Potluck Trivia:

Deviled Eggs which became popular at church potlucks in the south were referred to as “Dressed Eggs”. The name Deviled Eggs dates back to the 18th century.

Come join the fun at the next Potluck in January!

Happenings this Week:

Well here is the big happening around here – new site for webpage and blog. The format looks a bit different and we still have some things to iron out like how you readers can comment, but it is coming along. Send your feedback to me at cindy@stillwatersestates.com. Next week I will have the normal list of “Happenings” and we will start talking Turkey!

Weather: We continue to have fog in the mornings, dry days and a peek or two at sunshine each day. The weather folks say we are working on the driest October in a long while. No rain predicted until the first of November. Enjoy!
